Description and Sources

Description

Castle Hill, a natural mound, was used in the construction of a mound and bailey castle. traces of the bailey can be seen to the east and much medieval pottery has been found on the site <1e>

The mound is very large, 25ft high on the west and rising steeply from the pool...it has been adapted from a sandy glacial mound. The ditch on the N,W and S is 10-12ft wide . An ice house has been built (into it)..The top is flat, indented here and there with canine graves. The diameter at the bottom is 80ft, at the top 25ft. There are no traces of masonry associated with the mound, nor any traces of a bailey or cottages now cover the area noted in 1930, when much C13 medieval pottery was found (now in Shrewsbury Museum). The site is known traditionally as Ethelred's Castle <1f>
The icehouse is situated in the ESE scarp of the motte <1g>

Ice house. C18. Red brick. Barrel-vaulted entrance passage leading to domed central chamber. No door at time of survey (June 1986). The ice house has been built within a motte (County A.M. no. 273) <2>

Evaluated for MPP in 1990-1: Medium score as one of 43 Motte castles; one of less than 10 Ice Houses <4>

Scheduling affirmed in 2001. Scheduling description: ->

-> The monument includes the earthwork and buried remains of a motte castle and an 18th century icehouse, situated to the north west of Pool, House. The castle is believed to have been the principal holding (or caput) of a Norman lord in the manor of Eldredelei (Alderley) and in the early 12th century was held by the Dunstanvill family. A roughly circular steep-sided glacial mound about 7m high has been adapted and used to form the motte. It is surrounded by undulating land and is approximately 65m in diameter at its base and 35m across the top. The summit of the motte is flat, but rises gradually from the north west to the south east. Quarrying for sand in modern times has modified the eastern and western parts of the motte, which in the early 20th century resulted in the discovery of sherds of 13th century pottery and part of a rim of a bronze cauldron. These artefacts are attributed to the final period of occupation of the castle. They appear to have been associated with a charcoal rich deposit and burnt soil, suggesting that the structures on top of the motte were burnt down. The top of the motte has been used as a dog cemetery. Three in situ grave slabs all date to around 1930. ->

-> In the 18th century a brick-built icehouse was inserted into the south eastern side of the mound. A barrel-vaulted entrance passage, 5.5m long, leads to a domed ice-chamber, approximately 3m in diameter. This type of icehouse is known as a cup and dome ice well. The lower part of the mound was dug away to form a platform for unloading and loading ice in front of the entrance passage. Some of the earth from the construction of the icehouse was deposited to the east of the platform to form a raised track. The platform and the western end of the trackway, as well as the icehouse itself, are included in the scheduling. The icehouse probably served as the ice store for Pool House, a farmhouse of 16th or 17th century date, extensively altered and extended in the 19th century. The icehouse is a Listed Building Grade II. ->

-> Ice was probably obtained from the pond within the narrow steep-sided valley to the south of the Pool House. The pond, which is approximately 0.6ha in area, was created by constructing a dam across the valley to the south west of the castle mound to retain the water flowing from the south east. Water levels in the pond are controlled by a sluice in the northern end of the dam. Although it seems likely that the ice was obtained from the pond, the relationship between the icehouse and the pond cannot be proven. Hence the pond is not included in the scheduling. ->

-> The memorial stones and all fence and gate posts are excluded from the scheduling, although the ground beneath these features is included <5>

The structure is situated below Castle Hill and Castle Hill Pool, between Adderley railway station and the south union canal. It is completely underground, reported to have a depth of 20m. And is constructed of brick, stone, earth and sand with an E facing entrance. The source of ice was the pool. <6>

Photographed during aerial survey in 2009. <7>

Description

Part of Adderley Churchyard cross, dug up about 1880 whilst digging a grave, is under one of the yew trees in the churchyard <1a>

No remains of a cross can now be seen under the yew trees in the churchyard. At SJ66103959 is a composite structure consisting of an old cross-base 0.7m square and 0.3m high on a float of old stones and concrete 1.2m square. A broached shaft 0.3m square and 0.7m high carries a cube of stone with 0.4m sides to which is affixed a sundial. A stone ball is fixed to the top. Local enquiries suggest that the structure has been in its present position for a considerable time. OS FI 1975 <1>

Sundial. Probably C18. Red sandstone. Square base with 2 steps, tapered square shaft with chamfered corners, cubic dial block with wrought-iron gnomons and globe finial. It is probable that this sundial incorporates parts (e.g. the shaft) of a former medieval churchyard or village cross <2>

Description

Moat field names on the Tithe Award map suggest a moat having once existed on the Lees, probably in the field adjacent to the N side of the farm. It is clear that the probable site of the moat has been largely destroyed and altered by the course of the railway line, now disused, but its likely site can still be made out. It appears to have been sited on a level piece of ground and to have used a natural stream course and its small valley as the N and W arms of the moat. The E arm of the moat is probably indicated by a now dry pond, which appears to have been subsequently enlarged into the area of the island. The S arm probably ran along the course of the present track leading to the farm, and was probably infilled when the railway bridge embankment was built. The moat appears to have been rectangular in shape. A probable slight dam bank is sited next to the stream course along the line of the presumed N arm-continuing its alignment on the other side of the stream is a scarp which runs NW till it is truncated by the railway line. This scarp and the dam bank are probably associated with the moat and may represent a widening of the moat ditch possibly to form a fishpond. There are no traces of building platforms or other features on the supposed area of the moat island. MD Watson FI. 1983 <1>

Evaluated for MPP in 1990-1, Low score as one of 133 moated sites. <3>

Postulated as a monastic farm contemporary with one at Ridgwardine to the south (PRN 08673). <4>

Description and Sources

Description

Before 1175 x 90 Walter de Dunstanville, Lord of Adderley, with the permission of the abbot of Shrewsbury, added part of Betton wood to his park (R. Eyton, Antiquities of Shropshire 9 (1859), 199). That may have been the park mapped in 1577 which lay south- west of Adderley church (C. Saxton, Map of Shropshire) and presumably included much of the area later in Adderley park. In 1752 the formal grounds and main approach ran south from the hall to the Adderley-Shavington road (J. Rocque, Map of Shropshire). Between 1752 and 1808 the park was more than doubled in size, to extend north to the parish boundary (south of Cox Bank) and probably east to include Adderley mere. By 1808 a large lake had been created south of the hall, the main approach to which was now from the east, from the north end of Adderley village. Lodges had been built to either side of the entrance there (R. Baugh, Map of Shropshire (1808)). Later the park was reduced. By 1833 (O.S 1, LXXIII.NE) (the evidence of C. and J. Greenwood, Map of Shropshire (1827) is ambiguous) its extent was similar to that in 1889 (O.S. 6, XXVIII.SE), although in 1833 its north-eastern boundary was the main road north-west from Adderley, across which in 1889 the park extended to include most of the land south of Park Farm. The Hall itself was rebuilt 1877-81 for H.R. Corbet and demolished in 1955 (P. Reid, Burke and Saville's Guide to Country Houses, 2 (1980), 75) <1>

Description and Sources

Description

Parish church. North (Kilmorey) chapel of 1635-7 (restored 1822) and west tower of 1712-13. The rest rebuilt in 1801, by Richard Baker.

Yellow/grey sandstone ashlar, with some red sandstone in tower. Slate roofs. Cruciform plan with 3-bay nave, one-bay transepts and chancel and west tower.

Tower: 2 stages. Chamfered and moulded plinth, cill band with slightly chamfered top, moulded cornice and blocking cone. Triangular-pedimented gabled ends. 2 small gabled finials on blocking course to north, marking the division between nave, crossing and chancel. Cast-iron 3-light Gothic windows with panelled tracery. South wall of transept, east and north walls of chancel and north wall of crossing with full-height recessed blank panels. Central south nave doorway with pair of doors (each with 3 beaded flush panels) and moulded surround. Square projection in angle of chancel and south transept. North (Kilmorey) chapel: chamfered plinth, coved parapet string, and battlemented parapet with moulded coping and crocketed finials at corners (N. E. missing at time of survey) and at apex of gable. North window with four-centred arch, 3 cinquefoilheaded lights with mullions continuing up into head, moulded reveals and diamond-leaded glazing. Segmental-headed east window of 2 cinquefoilheaded lights with Y-tracery, reveals with cyma-recta moulding and diamond leaded lights. Nail-studded boarded west door with four-centred moulded archway under square head, moulded step and flight of 4 steps with rounded corners. Interior: divided at time of survey; the nave now serves as the parish church and the rest of the building has been declared redundant. Apsidal ends, to chancel and south transept. Round tower arch. Round-arched recess in south wall of chancel. Beaded flush dado panelling, ramped up to apse in south transept. Moulded cornice to flat ceiling. C12 stone font with circular base and bowl in the shape of a cushion capital with carved foliage ornament, a cross patee, addorsed volutes etc, and the inscription: "HIC MALE PRIMUS HOMO FRUITUR CUM CONIUGE POMO". Late C17 wooden altar rails with moulded base, fluted balusters with carved acanthus ornament to lower parts, and moulded rail; doubled balusters at each end. Benches of c. 1801 with beaded flush back and end panels. Hexagonal wooden pulpit of c. 1801 with 4 panels to each side, fluted band to base, fret ornament to moulded cornice, hexagonal stem with moulded base and top, and 3 steps. Screen to vestry (beneath tower) dated 1908 with raised and fielded panelling, central 4panelled door and moulded cornice. Segmental-headed C18 nail-studded door to tower in vestry. 7-bay inlaid wooden altar, probably c. 1900, with three-quarter columns. Oak chancel screen of c. 1908; 2:1:2 bays with unfluted Corinthian columns on pedestals with entablature, breaking forward in centre, crucifix above and pair of central wrought iron gates. Old oak iron-bound chest. Remains of C19 organ. South doors with large L-hinges on inside. Commandment boards flanking tower arch. Benefactors board in vestry "WILLIAM DUCKERS JOHN KEMP, CHURCH WARDENS 1826". Tablet with Creed and Lords Prayer above south door. Kilmorey chapel: c. 1637, Screen of 3:2:3 bays consisting of lower panels with strapwork, Tuscan colonnettes supporting pierced round arches with central pendants, openwork frieze above, and obelisk pinnacles against the wall above flanking central carved coat of arms. 4-bay roof consisting of moulded cambered tie-beams resting on wooden corbels and with carved shields in centre, and sub-divided by moulded joists with carved bosses at intersections. Panelling with strapwork ornament, carved frieze and moulded cornice. Doorway to north-west; inner door incorporated in panelling with carved inscription: " GOD SPAKE THESE WORDS AND SAYD I AM THE LORD THY GOD" and triangular pediment above with phoenix. Fireplace in west wall with C17 carved bolection surround and early C19 cast-iron grate with reeded architrave. Heraldic stained glass in north window.

Nave, chancel and south transept: plinth, cill band with slightly chamfered top, moulded cornice and blocking cone.

Triangular-pedimented gabled ends. 2 small gabled finials on blocking course to north, marking the division between nave, crossing and chancel. Cast-iron 3-light Gothic windows with panelled tracery. #### Description

Bridge. Probably late C18, widened in 1940. Red sandstone ashlar. Single segmental arch with flanking pilastered buttresses. Quadrant wing walls. Moulded string course to parapet with square end piers (minus globe finials). Initially built by the estate, this bridge and its neighbour (see Moreton Say CP - PRN 19296) were widened by the County Council in 1940, reusing the ashlar masonry. The bridges carry the minor road from Adderley to Wilkesley across the River Duckow at a point where it has been widened to form an ornamental lake known as the Long Pool. Bankhouse farmhouse is not included on this list. Anthony Blackwall, Historic Bridges of Shropshire, Shropshire Libraries, p66 <2>

Description and Sources

Description

Stable block, now farmbuildings. Circa 1787-8, probably by John Carline II of Shrewsbury.

Red brick with some grey sandstone ashlar dressings. Hipped slate roof. Square courtyard plan. 2 storeys. West (entrance) front: 4: 3: 4 bays. Toothed-brick eaves cornice. Central break has triangular pediment with moulded stone cornice and circular wooden clock in tympanum. Central square wooden bellcote with keyed round arches, moulded cornice, and incurved lead cap with globe finial and weathervane. Glazing bar sashes with gauged-brick heads and stone cills. Some windows are painted imitations and some are blocked. Central elliptical-arched carriageway with raised stone impost blocks and keystone. Pair of large wooden doors, each with 8 raised and fielded panels.

Courtyard: rear of entrance range of 2:3:2 bays. Central break with triangular pediment, clock in tympanum, and elliptical carriage arch with flanking doorways (left-hand blocked). Side ranges of 5 and 6 bays and rear range of 6 bays, north range and rear range with depressed arched carriage doorways (some blocked). Some painted imitation windows. At the time of survey (July 1986) some windows have lost their sashes or have been blocked. Late C19 and late C20 additions have been built adjoining, the west front.

John Carline the Younger (1761-1835) designed the portico (built 1787-9) of Adderley Hall (dem. And rebuilt 1877) for Sir Clive Corbet so it is possible that he was also responsible for the stable block. Adderley Hall Farmhouse is not included on this list.

Colvin, p187 <1><2>

A programme of building assessment was undertaken in 2004 in association with an application for the conversion of redundant farm buildings within the curtilage of Adderley Hall Farm, a Grade II Listed Building. This study takes the form of a level 2 survey. Stable block was built for Sir Clive Corbett Bart (1789-88), designed by John Carline II. An interesting feature of the stable block is a carved inscription in gothic script on the trusses of the single storey building attached to the stable block - Truth will set you free - in German, associated with the use of the parkland at the hall as a Prisoner of War camp in WW2. <4>

Description

Canal bridge. Circa 1830. Thomas Telford and Alexander Easton, engineers. Dressed red/yellow sandstone with tooled ashlar dressings. Elliptical arch with voussoirs and flush keystones. Chamfered string and parapet with square end piers and rounded coping. Slightly battered and curved abutments. Cast-iron corner posts on towpath side with grooves formed by rope haulage. Oval cast-iron number plate to south. This stretch of canal was built as part of the Birmingham and Liverpool Junction Canal (Act passed 1826, opened 1835) which was absorbed by the Ellesmere and Chester Canal in 1845 and eventually became part of the Shropshire Union in 1846. This bridge is slightly different from most on this stretch of the canal as it is not humped-backed but spans the short cutting at an angle to the horizontal.

The bridge marks the top end of the Adderley flight of locks. Charles Hadfield, The Canals of the West Midlands, pp183-9 <1><2>

Description and Sources

Description

Canal bridge. Circa 1830. Thomas Telford and Alexander Easton, engineers. Limewashed red brick with some blue brick dressings. Elliptical arch. Humped-back shape with chamfered stone string course and parapet with square end piers and rounded stone coping. Slightly battered and curved abutments. Cast-iron corner posts on towpath side with grooves caused by rope haulage. Oval cast-iron number plate to south-east. This stretch of the canal was built as part of the Birmingham and Liverpool Junction Canal (Act passed 1826, opened 1835) which was absorbed by the Ellesmere and Chester Canal in 1845 and eventually became part of the Shropshire Union in 1846. ### Description and Sources

Description

Entrance Lodge. 1885, attributed to Richard Norman Shaw but possibly by W. R. Lethaby. Finely-jointed orange brick with yellow/grey sandstone ashlar dressing. Pyramidal lead roof. Square plan. Neo-Georgian style. 2 storeys. Chamfered quoins and moulded dentil eaves cornice with blocking course. Central brick stack with stone base, flush stone quoins and stone coping with globe corner finials. First-floor small-paned Diocletian window with 2-light casement and gauged-brick head. Half-glazed door off-centre to left with 2 panels (lower beaded flush and upper moulded recessed) and small square window to right. Wide flat porch on deep shaped brackets (with later supports) and 5 stone steps up to door with coped low flanking walls. Return fronts, each with first-floor Diocletian window above ground-floor Venetian window consisting of small-paned lights divided by brick piers, stone cill, and gauged brick head with moulded dripstone or cornice. Rear with first-floor Diocletian window but inserted C20 ground-floor windows. Walled garden enclosure at rear with moulded stone coping and end pier with stone cap. Interior of lodge not inspected. This lodge and No. 2, Tittenley Lodge (qv) flank the beginning of the public road which passes through Shavington Park, (Shavington Hall demolished in 1959). Richard Norman Shaw carried out alterations at Shavington Hall for Arthur Pemberton Heywood - Lonsdale in 1885-6 but in 1903 Ernest Newton also worked at the house and probably designed other estate buildings (nos. 7 & 8, Shavington Park, Moreton Say, qv) and it has been suggested (Dr. Richard Morrice 1986) that he may have also designed the lodges. #### Description

The market cross stood at the corner where Rectory Lane branches off. The cross-shaft, broken off by the Puritans, was used for a sundial and when Adderley Hall (SJ65774016) was built circa 1860 it was taken there <1a>

No traces of a cross at SJ66203976. It is possible that remains of the market cross are incorporated in the sundial at SJ66203976 (PRN 01681-at the church). OS FI 1975 <1>

Description and Sources

Description

A single track line built by the Nantwich & Drayton Railway between the LNWR Shrewsbury-Crewe main line at Nantwich and Market Drayton, which opened in 1863. It was run by the Great Western Railway, although until the Wellington & Drayton Railway (WDR) [PRN 08029] opened some years later it was not actually connected to the rest of their network. After the opening of the WDR, the Nantwich & Drayton was double tracked to match it. The line was not a great success as a passenger railway, and it was used mainly for freight. It was closed to passengers in 1963 and completely in 1967 <1>

Description

The house was rebuilt by Richard Baker in the late 18th century. A letter from Baker mentions the cost. Victorian Adderley has since been demolished: it seemed old fashioned by the 1870s, so was rebuilt to a plan which seems to have been largely the result of ideas of Mr and Mrs Corbet themselves. Included in Gazetteer. No further information given. <1>

Hall, 1877-81 by George Devey for Henry Reginald Corbet, was demolished in the 1950s. Stables late C18. Quite grand, of red brick with grey sandstone dressings in four ranges round courtyard. The W front is of eleven bays, the centre three set forward under a pediment. John Carline, who added a portico to the pre-Devey house in 1787-8, may have designed the stables. North and South Lodges by Devey. Polygonal window bay, some diapered brickwork. <2>

The original Adderley Hall, as altered by Carline was destroyed by fire in 1857. A new hall designed by George Devey was constructed in 1877-81 for H.R. Corbett. This was a great rambling gothic building with battlemented, pointed gables, bay windows, a tower and much diaper brickwork. This hall was in turn demolished in 1955. <3>

Description and Sources

Description

Regular Courtyard U-Plan. Additional Plan Details: Covered Yard, Presence of small second yard with one main yard evident, Additional detached elements to main plan. Date Evidence from Farmhouse: 19th Century. Date Evidence from Working Building(s): None.

Position of Farmhouse: Detached, side on to yard. Farmstead Location: Isolated. Survival: Extant - No apparent alteration. Confidence: High.

Other Notes: Large modern sheds to the side of the historic farmstead suggest that the farmstead is still in use. Back to back pigsties near house. Small amount of loss such as a small roof portion of covered yard. Pigsties partly lost? Small field shed lost. <1>

Sych Farm is an attractive assemblage of mid-19th century model farm buildings, opposite the contemporary farmhouse, on the outskirts of Market Drayton. It has suffered relatively few major alterations since it was built, probably by the Corbels of Adderley, as a tenanted farm. The buildings including the basics of any farm of the period — threshing barn, cartshed with granary above, stables, shelter shed and cowhouses. ->

-> Each element of the farmstead is described in detail. Report prepared in association with proposals for adaptive reuse. <2>

Possible site of a fortified manor house at 'Warandashale', granted a license to crenellate in 1294. Evidence from a writ of 1270 might suggest that the location of this site was near Longslow, possibly at a site which retains the name 'Castle Hill'.

Description and Sources

Description

In 1294 Richard de Peulesdon received a license to crenellate his manor house at 'Warandashale', a place name now lost, but possibly associated with Wardale at SJ 673 298, c.4km S of Market Drayton (see PRN 33923). A possible alternative site is suggested in a writ issued by Richard against Hugh de Longslow in 1270. If it assumed that Richard and Hugh were landowning neighbours, then the site of the castle may be retained in the placename of 'Castle Hill', nearer Longslow. <1>
